AT RAGEDY THAT BECAME A ROMANCE

How the Tenor Snatched "Carmen" from Death and Won Her Heart.

MOST persons will recall the tragic scene, already described in this newspaper, which occurred when Madame Maria Gay and Signor Zenatello, the great tenor, were singing in that singularly ill-fated opera, "Carmen" at San Paulo, in Brazil.

Madame Gay had just concluded her great scene in the last act with Don Jose, represented by Signor Zenatello. As she fell dying to the stage, in accordance with the requirements of the opera, and Signor Zenatello was bending over her, the great audience became wild with enthusiasm and rose to its feet, applauding vociferously. The applause was prolonged, and Madame Gay turned her head to catch a glimpse of her admirers, when to her horror she saw them slowly sinking down out of sight. It was a scene to take away one's feet. In fact, the floor had given way under the weight of the great stamping, gesticulating audience, and it was falling down into a cellar with a confused, panic-stricken mass of people.

Some of those nearest to the stage succeeded in climbing on it, and nearly killed Madame Gay in their frantic efforts to escape. By a tremendous effort Signor Zenatello succeeded in dragging her out of the way of the trampling mob. Of those who fell through the floor two women and a man were killed outright, and fifty persons were removed to the hospitals, of whom several died or were permanently injured. Madame Gay was not only injured, but her nerves were so shaken by the terrible scene she had witnessed that she was unable to sing for a long time.

Now, it seems that this tragedy has been transformed into a romance, for Madame Gay has become engaged to Signor Zenatello. Their close association during the performance of "Carmen," and especially his devotion to her on the night of the catastrophe, and his heroic efforts to save her from the panic-stricken mob, caused them to fall deeply in love with each other. They will be married very soon, and it is hoped that Carmen and Don Jose will live happily together ever afterward in real life, a very different fate from that which occurs to them on the stage.

It is a remarkable fact that "Carmen" throughout its existence as an opera has been attended by almost constant fatalities, accidents and mishaps of one kind and another. Even the composer, Bizet, died in poverty and obscurity before his work won success. By some persons the misfortunes that have followed "Carmen" are attributed to the apocryphal, who regard the opera as a slander on their race.

At the Manhattan Opera House in New York last Winter Madame Dresler-Glanoff, while playing Carmen sank to the floor with a stream of blood gushing from her

THE CURSE OF THE THAW CASE

SE The Amazing Chain of Evil Fortunes That Has Followed the Thaw Trials.

Evelyn Nesbit Thaw

"To be concerned in the Thaw case is to invite ill fortune," a seeress said when Harry Thaw was tried for the murder of Stanford White.

Looking into the future she said, she saw a train of evil events following those persons who were prominent in the memorable trials, one of which ended in a disastrous trial by jury, the other a provisional acquittal of the murderer on the ground of his insanity. The retirement of the heroine of the case to a sanatorium and the shocking death of Dr. Carlton Flint last month recalled the warning of this Cassandra. In the light of that prophecy a long train of misfortunes can be seen in the wake of the celebrated trials. It throws a searchlight upon accidents, failures of fortune, divorce, broken friendships and tragic deaths.

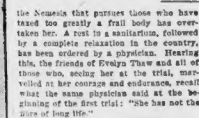

When Evelyn Thaw took her place upon the witness stand, the first impression she made was one of her exceeding beauty. The next was of her extreme fragility.

"She looks all nerves," whispered an observer.

"Predestined to consumption," was the reply.

That she bore herself with such heroism and endurance on the stand was a matter of marvel. It was predicted that when she left the stand she would leave it for a sick bed. To the wonder of every one connected with the trial, this did not happen. Then followed predictions that she would utterly collapse at the close of the trial. These prophecies also failed.

She heroically endured both ordeals. But

The first trial was not yet a week old when the machinery of the law was stopped by the death of a woman, the wife of one of the jurors. That juror rallying from the blow sufficiently to attend to his duty of following the evidence, the trial was resumed, but the shadow of tragedy lay long across the path of the Shaw trial. A beautiful woman and a prominent young physician, closely connected with the trial, have yielded their lives to it.

Bankruptcy, a suit for divorce, the desertion of two husbands by their wives, the renunciation by an American girl of the tarnished title she had acquired by marriage, mortgages of ancestral homes, accidents that bordered upon tragedy, sundering ties of business and friendship, the indictment of a prominent public official all followed as a shadow follows its substance, one after the other.

The death of Dr. Carson Flint proved a tragedy to the city. Dr. Flint was a shining star. Dr. Flint was young, talented, popular, one in whose career ambition was merging into achievement. Those who watched the progress of the Thaw case will recall that Dr. Flint, yet comparatively young, was the first to stand, and how fierce was the battle between attorneys as to whether his evidence might be admitted. He had been called to testify to a professional acquaintance with Dr. Carson Flint, who was the father of the dead white girl who was receiving the attention of John Barrymore. His testimony was finally excluded, and he left the stand, followed by a look half of triumph, half of grief. He was Dr. Carson Flint's daughter, and he had seen the Thaw's face, and his battle eyes.

Last month he left his home in Manhattan for a week-end with his friend, Dr. William G. Wyllie, at Dr. Wyllie's cottage at Newburgh. Dr. Wyllie in his own statement had taken his friend to the station. Both had alighted from it and were crossing the tracks when a freight train was passing, running past at high speed struck Dr. Flint. A lamp on the machine struck his thigh, knocking him down and hurling him beneath the machine. His clothing caught in the gearing. He was dragged for some distance and died before the train stopped. Wyllie's cottage, two physicians were summoned from Newburgh, and an eminent surgeon and two nurses started by special train from New York to his relief. He died before their arrival. Dr. Wyllie, testifying at the trial, said he was "robbing" the body of his friend, "young man," until called from a full and useful career by fate, the inexorable fate, as the modern Cassandra had predicted, of the Thane of

As sad, though less sudden, was the death of the wife of Clifford Hartridge, the counsel of record engaged by Harry Thaw. Mrs. Hartridge—young, beautiful, of the superb physique that bespeaks abundant health and long life—disappeared from some soon after the close of the Thaw trial. "I have gone away. Don't look for me. It will be of no use." Was the substance of the note she left behind her the only clue as to her intent or her whereabouts. Her husband spent his fortune in a search for her. Her children wept for her, then by the merciful bounty granted to peaceful minds, slowly forgot her. Early last Summer she was found dead in a sanatorium in Pittsburg. The mystery of her disappearance of her husband, of her wanderings for a year, has never been solved. The evil genius of the Thaw trial had secured another victim.

The train of disaster followed him in a erious form. At his home at Pittsburg he was struck by lightning. The bolt shattered a tree near his residence, burned an outbuilding near the house, and laid the physician low and unconscious for hours. Death grazed him. "He was saved by the shadow of an inch," said the physician who resuscitated him.

Among the disasters which took the form of accidents was the automobile wreck at Liberty, N. Y., in which Dr. Smith and Jeffille was chief sufferer. Dr. Jeffille was one of the foremost alienists in the protracted tract. For rest he went to Liberty, N. Y., and there joined United States Attorney General Baker, of Washington, D. C., Baker on that tour, the latter seemed seized by a puerile spirit. The chauffeur was helpless. The automobile literally blew up, and Dr. Jeffille was carried to his hotel on a stretcher. So still was the broad-shouldered figure familiar to court habitués as "The Fighting Doc" that women fainted and screamed, believing that it was a corpse. Dr. Jeffille's recovery has

One silent figure at the Thaw trial, one so modest, so beautiful and so genuinely sorrowful that it enlisted instant respect and pity, denied to some of the other figures, was the prisoner's sister Alice, the Countess of Yarmouth. While the brown-eyed girl sat day after day in the chair immediately behind her brother, in the field air, amid the unaccustomed crowd of the courtroom, she was pouring tears across in her bosom. One was a grief thrown by all the world—that for her brother's sake she was to be a witness. There was even more poignant, for it was the gnawing torment of disillusionment. Even then the Countess of Yarmouth was facing the assembly for a divorce from the Earl of Yarmouth, the son of the Duke of Devonshire. She was to be asked to show herself to her family and to the world, had to be her girlhood maid a hero to her heart of a girl, her lover. The brief record of a divorce decree subsequently granted to her, Countess of Yarmouth, was nevertheless a document of tests and heartbreak.

Close upon the end of the trial came the announcement that the firm of Hartridge & Peabody had dissolved. It was a twin blow with the disappearance of the senior counsel's wife.

From friends of Mr. and Mrs. George I. Carnegie came the news that the Thaws were in comparatively straitened circumstances. Mrs. Carnegie, with her sister, the Countess of Yarmouth, now having resumed her maiden name, Alice Thaw, had spent all her available cash in her brother's interest. She had lent him all the money she could secure.

The most serious threat I ever did in my life was when I came to Chicago and with my baby in the care of others. At that time I was twenty-three years old and I want to keep the baby with me for two years. I don't remember I looked at her and thought how bad I had become in my desires and thoughts I wanted to kill myself. Second, her presence was aggravating my nervous system to such an extent that I feared I never could get well unless I sent her away.

"If I ever got out of the prison I would go back to my home in Ukraine, Wis., and with my baby try to spend the remaining years of my life in a peaceful village."

A movement in the foot to catch the release of Mrs. Romadka but so far the efforts have been in vain. It is possible, though, that in a year or so she may be pardoned if she lives that long.

The Epitaph of Our Earth

When This Warm, Beautiful Planet Is Cold and Waiting for Dissolution, What Words Will Describe the Planet's Career and That of Our Race, the Thinking Atoms That Inhabit It?

THE old earth will die one day. Planets and the suns are born, as we are born. They die, grow cold, are broken up and scattered, as we die and are scattered. All of us, YOU who read this, will some day die. You will be scattered as widely as the wind, scattered as widely as were scattered the products that through the years have built you up. The iron in your blood will still be iron, the lime in your bones will still be lime, and the thinking spirit that animates you will still be a thinking spirit. Nothing is lost in this wonderful universe of justice and perfect organization.

There is no loss, no real death; only change and renewed life. Each of us dies, and the story is told. Always in some graveyard there is a stone that tells, in a few words: "Here lies So and So. He began at such a time. He ended at such a day. He accomplished such and such things."

All planets and suns, like all the sons of earth, die when their time comes. The moon that moves our tides and makes life here possible was once a living planet, warmed by the heat given out by our earth in its period of incandescence. Our earth cooled off and the moon became cold and died as life became possible for human beings on this planet.

The life of our human race, unless our little minds deceive us, is the real, conscious life of this earth.

Some have thought that the great planets have their OWN life; that each is inhabited by its own great spirit, and that the lives of us tiny creatures are no more important in the actual universe, as compared with the lives of planets and suns, than are the lives of the little microbes that inhabit our bodies. RELIEVING OF COURSE, THAT WE ARE NOT ALIVE, THAT WE HAVE NO SPIRIT, AND THAT WE ARE ONLY MADE AS A HABITATION FOR THEM.

We MAY be simply the microbes, the little, thinking, subordinate creatures, inhabiting the body of a great, living, thinking being that we call the earth. But our belief is to the contrary, and this question, "What shall be the epitaph of our earth?" is based upon the belief that man is the THINKING LIFE of the earth, and that what HE does will be the final story of the earth's career.

An Englishman, Sir Oliver Lodge, has written an epitaph for our globe. You will find it on this page. It is a cynical utterance, and does not express the man's real feeling. Lodge, like many others, has gone through various phases of thought.

Until It One Morning
Fully Recognized Its Own Futility and Becomingly
Collapsed. It thereupon
Audaciously Announced That its Natural Forces

It Sadly, Quietly but Respectfully
Resolved that One More
Into Those Overcast Elements
From Which
For the General Credit of the Universe
It Would Prefer to Have Done Better
Never to Have Emerged

He began in ignorance, he entered upon the stage of mental vanity, thinking that he and the other little scientists around him had solved or could solve the big problems, and then he found that he and others were walking in a circle. Some small questions they could answer, but THE BIG QUESTION never.

The epitaph that we print was written to express his contempt for those that refused to believe things that they cannot prove—contempt well deserved for the materialist, the base, flat, conceited little minds that seek to explain all things of their own knowledge. His epitaph is presented as one fit for a world of materialists, calling themselves a mere result of accident, coming here for no purpose, dwelling here for no purpose, and disappearing with the earth, having accomplished nothing, done nothing, gained nothing, to the void whence they came.

Read this epitaph and ask yourself in earnest and apart from cynical criticism: "WHAT WILL BE THE REAL EPI-TAPH OF THIS EARTH AND OF OUR RACE WHEN ALL SHALL BE OVER AND THE IDENTITY OF THIS LITTLE SPECK OF MATTER IN THE GREAT INFINITUDE OF SPACE SHALL COME TO AN END?"

It is an interesting thought, and if you address your minds to it earnestly it must be of benefit to you. Such questions do that which is of importance to all of us. They open new thought, stir into activity those parts of the brain which remain dormant usually in our material, struggling daily lives.

This earth will die, and we living creatures shall leave it cold and desolate. The end of life here is inevitable, for the sun that warms us and keeps us alive is gradually diminishing in heat. In years which we cannot measure—millions surely, tens of millions perhaps—the sun's heat will no longer suffice, and this old earth will die from lack of vitality, peacefully and quietly, let us hope, as the old men die peacefully and quietly when the warmth of vitality fails too long.

What will be the final story of our earth, the story of our race upon this earth? We cannot doubt that the lives of planets and suns or great solar systems vary as much as the lives of individuals. Man, the thinking atom of the universe, is typical of the great sun or planet. One man begins his career and finishes it normally, getting out of himself the best that is in him. Another takes the wrong path, goes down to disgrace and a bad ending. A third dies of violence, a fourth becomes a maniac and ends thus.

This earth of ours, like an individual, might take any one of those paths. Our human race has had its moments of mania, its moments of violence and crime. The

"THE GAY MUSICIAN" AT THE HOLDS

THIS theatrical season in Boston is now under full swing and the amusement lovers are coming to see some of the best shows ever staged in this or any other land. The forecast of the amusement world for the Autumn promises much that is novel and beautiful, interesting and entertaining in the musical and dramatic line. As from here the Boston theatres offer a stronger line of attractions than any other in the city. I am, and every one who is in the city with me, very anxious to see the new shows that are coming to the city. The first of these is the "WICK OF THE GRAND" at the Keiths, which is a new and original production. It is a musical comedy in three acts, and is the work of the famous playwright, George F. Walker. The story is a very original one, and the production is a very fine one. The cast is a very strong one, and the production is a very fine one. HOLD CHAIR PUSHER IN ROBERTS CRIME

Police Declare Sensation Will Follow Arrest of Colored Man.

Atlantic City, Sept. 6.—(News Jackson) The negro white man, in charge of the chair occupied at the trial of Rogers and Mrs. S. G. Williams, the principals in the boardwalk shooting mystery, who was placed under arrest today has been held in C. 100 jail.

Chief of Detectives Whelan stated that the man, who was a possibly big fellow, published this morning, in which the negro was quoted as repudiating the highway shooting charge. He was a possibly big fellow, he never made any such statements in the past. He reported that at the time the negro has been in custody.

Buy Laughs—Buy Music WAIT FOR TOMORROW

We have been in the business of propagating laughter for many years—our advice has been sound—it has always brought results—dividends have been stupendous—the laughs we have provided, if put into one guffaw, would shake the sun from its firmament—hence our latest advice to all joy seekers today is good. We have the following, and they will get in on the ground floor for the big noise as a laugh winner:

SAM BERNARD

Who stands foremost as a dialectician, and the Smith-DeKoven development, blocks out his best ore—The Messrs. Sam S. & Les Shurt (fine) are the guarantors. Mr. Bernard has in the exploitation of his laugh mine such reliable experts as Grace La Rue, Ada Lewis, News Aymer, Florence Gerald, Daisy Greene, Phil Riley, Sam Edwards, Gertrude Call and sixty dainty corpsees. Sixteen chances to get in on the big game starting tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock. Registrations daily, at the

Birt's Head Wash

What It Is Made Of

Birt's Head Wash, the newest and best preparation for hair and scalp troubles, is made of the following ingredients:

REFINED SOAP—which is used to cleanse the hair and scalp of dirt and impurities generally.

COCHIN COCAINUT OIL—which helps to make a profuse lather, and gives a beautiful, silky gloss to the hair.

WHITE OF EGGS—which softens the scalp and soothes the scalp, and is one of the oldest and best known for this purpose.

GLYCERIN, which is a valuable thing in all skin troubles. It softens, nourishes and heals the scalp, and its excellent properties are known to everybody.

SALICYLIC ACID—which is a great destroyer of germs and bacteria. It is also one of the standard antiseptics, and prevents the disagreeable odors that are often found on the head and hair.

You see, there is no secret or humbug about Birt's Head Wash.

The whole formula is laid before the public plainly, so that people may know precisely what they are putting on their heads.

Your hair ought to be washed often, because cleanliness is the very first thing needed to cure dandruff, stop falling hair and to overcome nearly every other scalp and hair trouble.

You can use Birt's Head Wash at least once a week, because you can see from the formula that it is perfectly safe for men, women and children.

If you wash your hair with common soaps and shampoos, it will become dry, faded and lifeless, because they often contain too much alkali or potash.

Birt's Head Wash doesn't merely clean your scalp and hair. It doesn't merely make a lot of lather. It leaves the hair glossy and the scalp healthy.

It keeps the pores of the scalp open, so the hair-follicles can secure proper nourishment.

When you are through using Birt's Head Wash your hair will not be dry, but will be silky, soft and lustrous, and your scalp will be perfectly clean.

Follow this rule: Don't put a drop of anything on your head unless you know exactly what it is, and your hair troubles will be a thing of the past.

SPECIAL NOTICE: If your druggist does not have Birt's Head Wash in stock, be sure and ask him to get a package of it for you from his wholesaler. Every wholesale druggist in New England has it on sale, and any retail druggist can get a supply quickly by telephoning.

Birt's Head Wash, because it is exactly the thing that nearly everybody's head needs.

A Great Criminal of the Last Generation

By Julian Hawthorne

ALEXANDER THOMAS, the "Breiten Field," of terrible memory, who supported his innocent wife and children by wholesale murder of the most pitiless and revolting kind, was for years an intimate friend of Julian Hawthorne in the latter's earlier days in Dresden, Saxony.

Now this distinguished son of Nathaniel Hawthorne, one of America's immortal men of letters, has put on paper for the first time in all these years the story of the almost unbelievable crimes of this man who, nevertheless, as Mr. Hawthorne declares, appeared to his family and personal friends "as honest, as humane and as simple and artless a human creature as had ever been created in this world."

No stranger story of fact or of fiction has ever been written than this of an arch-criminal whom readers to-day have either never heard of or long forgotten.

RUSSIANS RESENT ATTACK ON TOLSTOI

Martial Law Reverted to in Moscow and Warsaw to Halt Celebration.

STOP HOMAGE TO WRITER

Unable to Speak.

St. Petersburg, Sept. 5.—The circular addressed by the Holy Synod to all believers advising to them not to participate in the celebration Wednesday in honor of Count Leo Tolstoy's sixtieth birthday, on the ground that those to praise this opponent of the church, must be considered as blasphemers.

because of weak faith, meets with approval from only a limited section of the press and the public, the latter being represented by the league of Russian people. This circular is a really a second communication of the kind with :

The newspapers condemn it and a wrath is expressed by the Novoe Vremya, which usually is a strong supporter of the Gov-per of Russian society in general. The administrative provincial authorities are stirring themselves at the eleventh hour to back the observance of the Count's jubilee, and the governors of the provinces of Moscow, Warsaw, etc., have resorted to the provisions of martial law to veto the celebrations arranged by the municipalities. Furthermore, the governor of St. Petersburg has ordered the municipal performance arranged for a local theatre.

A telegram received here from Yampaya Pollana says that the influenza and fever from which the Count has been suffering have disappeared and that the inflammation in his leg has subsided. In the last few days, however, he has become extremely weak and greatly emaciated and he is scarcely able to speak. But in spite of this, his mental vigor is not impaired. The Count's wife has declared that even

The encyclical is marked for its bitter language. "I have denied the Mexicans and backslid from the church," it says. "Since 1901 he has ranked among the pagans. Believers must abstain from honoring such a man in order to save their souls from the pagan's 'load.' The encyclical will be read and preached from all pulpits Sunday and for several Sundays thereafter. It is intended to exert all the resources of the church in a vigorous anti-Tolstoid protest."

By the shade of the Spanish Inquisition is seeking to darken one of the most precious holidays of Russian civilisation—
the birthday of Russia's greatest writer.
Good taste should have prevented the Holy Synod from annihilating Tolstoy again at the grave's threshold. Without sharing Tolstoy's theological views, the world of the Russian Orthodox people is forced and inducted, by the full right and duty to honor Tolstoy, and it would be ungrateful and ignoble to abstain from doing so. I am a fervent member of the

ARRESTED, GIRL SAYS, 'I'M MARRIED'

Certificate Wins Mary O'Brien's Freedom When Arraigned as Stubborn Child.

PARENTS' FORGIVE HER

Happy End to the Romantic Courtship That Overrode Opposition by Elopement.

"I'm married now," was all the testimony offered by pretty Mary O'Brien of No. 4 River street, Roxbury, when she answered a charge of being a stubborn child, brought against her by her father, Martin O'Brien, in the Roxbury Municipal Court. Yet it was sufficient to win a summary verdict of "no judgment" from Judge Nathan Williams.

With her young husband standing by her side, Mrs. O'Brien's father graciously procured her marriage certificate to further cement the union.

Protection officer Mrs. Celia Tappen and Probation Officer Palmer of the Dudley street station, who were present in the case when the complaint was made about a month ago, said that the young woman, who they said disappeared from her home about a month ago, had been found by her parents and returned with her for the purpose of being married. The official objection of the parents was that the couple had eloped without the necessary parental consent.

Married in Brooklyn.

Miss Mary recently had opinions of her own as to what was a sensible thing to do when she was carried off to a carefully arranged ceremony in Brooklyn. For four weeks she had been in the hands of her parents, who were very much displeased with her. She was a young woman of about 18 years of age, and was very much attracted by a young man named Charles H. Wachter, who was a student at the University of Brooklyn. They were married in Brooklyn on August 25th.

Parents Grant Forgiveness.

On her way to her home after the arrest, she was met by her father, who told her that he was very much pleased with her. He said that he was very much pleased with her, and that he was very much pleased with her. He said that he was very much pleased with her, and that he was very much pleased with her.

DORCHESTER COUPLE, WHO OBSERVE THEIR SILVER WEDDING, AND ONLY CHILD

Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Wachter.

Condemned by the engineers of the Boston & Albany Railroad and the city of Boston as being unsafe for public travel, a movement has been started to suspend traffic on the old Broadway bridge spanning the railroad tracks over St. Rose's Roman Catholic Church in Chelsea.

Patrons of the Boston & Albany Railroad Company who ride daily over the bridge on their way to and from Boston through Chelsea, will take up the demand for a stronger bridge, last week complained to the officials of the railroad and the city of Chelsea, and both sets of officers have agreed to suspend traffic on the bridge.

The best from the recent fire also had much to do with the suspension of traffic on the bridge.

The Boston and Northern Street Railway Company has stationed men on each side of the bridge to see that no car can at a time cross the bridge. Large signs have also been posted on each end of the bridge, which read: "When City of Boston Bridges."

The action on the part of the road has stirred the people in Chelsea to action, and there is a strong feeling that the bridge is unsafe for public travel.

The suspension of traffic on the bridge is a serious matter, and it is hoped that the city of Boston will take prompt action to replace the bridge.

OFFICIALS AND CAR WILL CONFER

Boston & Northern to Take Up Matter of Wages and Hours of Employment.

Representatives of the Railway Car Men's Union of the Boston & Northern Street Railway Company will meet the officials of the city of Boston to discuss the present wage scale and working conditions.

The agreement under which the men are now working was signed two years ago and it was originally intended that it should continue for two years.

It was, however, the agreement which was signed in 1906, and it was originally intended that it should continue for two years.
